ABOUT

The Digital Finance Institute is a think tank for digital finance; one of the few think tanks founded by women. We have three foundational pillars – financial inclusion, responsible innovation, and support for women in FinTech. Today, the Institute is run by millennials, which we believe is important for Canada’s digital economy evolution.

In our work, we represent a strategic link in the digital finance ecosystem among the financial services sector, NGOs, academia, financial regulators and policy makers to promote financial innovation and vibrancy through thought leadership, engagement, advocacy, research and education.

That strategic link comes together at APEC 2019, for example, where the institute is invited to give a talk on AI, banking and regulation to the 21 member countries, which helps promote Canadian innovation.

Part of the way we have helped build a national FinTech and AI community is by convening national FinTech and AI conferences since 2015. We also joined, as founding members, SWIFT’s Global FinTech Hubs Federation, representing Canada, an initiative that connected technology hubs around the world to promote FinTech and build alliances.

This year, we are helping to promote Canada’s financial services sector by launching Canada FinTech Week in Toronto from August 12 – 15, 2019, and are pleased that the City of Toronto has officially proclaimed it as “FinTech Week”. Our premier event, the annual Canadian FinTech & AI Awards, launched five years ago, continues our tradition of celebrating Canadian innovation, and brings together the financial services community to recognize and pay tribute to Canadian innovators.

As we celebrate our fifth year, we are excited about the growth of technological innovation in Canada. We hope you join us on this journey in celebrating Canadian innovation.

Financial technology plays a vital role in the economic development of Canada through the disruption of traditional financial services. A digitalized economy, technological innovation, demographic changes and expanding market demands have been key drivers behind the fast growth of FinTech in Canada.

Market research and informational interviews were conducted with various stakeholders to gather data to help identify leading companies. Factors such as product innovation, disruption of a service, scalability, growth, and adoption were considered in preparing Canada’s 2019 Top 50 FinTech Companies. We standardized the ranges of numeric variables, and measured each company’s score index by calculating the weighted average under comprehensive consideration of the main factors. We are proud to find out that many successful Canadian FinTech companies leverage technology to solve local problems in the financial services sector, and also provide solutions on a global scale.

The top 50 FinTech companies in this report represent a wide diversity of sub-sectors in FinTech, including Blockchain, capital markets, insurance, RegTech, payments and finance. We are grateful for the input and insight from FinTech leaders and industry experts in preparing this year’s compilation.
